FORMWINICATED. MORE PIPE-LAYING AND MADAME ADOLPH.

In justice to the community at large as well as to my humble self and large family, I feel constrained to promulgate the following mysterious proceedings: particularly, as, because my telegraphic wires smell very strongly after misrepresentations, and predict not an honorable straight forward attack on my feeble abilities, but, as usual, a whiggish pipe-laying, undermining, like superannuated beings who wear "perukes," false hair, commonly called "Whigs" .-Yesterday morning a gentleman in a fine black cloth suit, with all the ability of a gentle "Whig," demanded an audience with me. One of my usherers conducted him to my private studio, and introduced me to him. "I come from the office of the Whig," said the gentleman to me, "and demand an explanation of what you meant by the article in the Union and American against us." My laconic answer was, 'precisely what I said, but before I make any further explanations, honor me with your "name and standing." "My name is Brown, and I am one of the proprietors of the Nashville Whig." "If that is the case," replied I, "I shall feel greatly pleased to proceed with my professional examination." I examined his real "whig," not a false one, and to my great satisfaction found a well developed cranium. Having partly described his character and disposition, I proceeded to his business and pronounced him at once not to be the proprietor of the Whig, or the Mr. Brown, to whom I had extended my humble professional invitation. "Well." ejaculated he, "even admitting that I am not the Mr. Baows, I have been sent by that paper to see you." "Then," responded I, rising from my chair to leave him, "you should not have misrepresented yourself, and therefore, I decline your examination." He blushed like a young bride, and left in dismay; having failed to lay his whiggish pipes.

To the above I am at any time ready to affix my affidavit, which can be substantiated by three respectable witnesses. Ordering one of my agents to follow him in the street, I received the report, that he had walked straight to the office of the Whig. So ended this mysterious affair,

MADAME JOSEPHINE ADOLPH. | From the New Orleans Bulletin, June 18.1 NEGRO RUMBUG.

We cannot term the reports of what occurred night before last, anything else than bare, sheer, unadulterated humbug, without one single atom of common sense to enliven, or give credibility to, its upotterable absurdity.

For the benefit of the public, outside of Louisiana, we will, very briefly, recapitulate the incidents, as reported, of night before last, about which a good deal of talk will be had in the North, but the merest allusion to which caused a broad grin to mantle over the countenances of every acquaintance we met yesterday. About 11 o'clock on Tuesday ovening, a free negro came to the police office, and made the awful revelation that the slaves of the city, and of the neighboring parishes, were about to rise in insurrection in a few hours. Shortly the Chief of Police came in, to whom the communication of said negro was made known. He was senssibly incredulous; but finally concluded to accompany the negro to a house where he alleged the ringleader was to be found. That negro was arrested, without trouble, and on him were found a big knife, a revolver, a sabre, a bag of bullets, about a pound of powder, two boxes of percussion caps, two silver watches and eighty-six dollars in money.-When taken to the police office he became thoroughly scared, negro like, and commenced making any monot of extravagant confessions-as wild and incredible as any story in the Arabian Nights. He said that a grand plan of insurrection was drawn out on paper, that twenty-five hundred negroes were engaged in it; that the city was to be attacked at three different points; that he was on his way to Carrolton to meet one party of the insurrectionists; that another party was to assemble below the city; a third somewhere between the city and the lake: that they were to take the Powder Magazine on the other side of the river; attack the United States Barracks; take all the arsenals; seize the gun smith shops; rifle the Mint; plunder the banks; raise the devil generally, and that the firing of the city in different quarters, was to be signal of an universal saturnalia of riot and massacre, probability and possibility, a vast amount of gas will be expended; and we do not think that much popularity will be acquired. In the first place, the whole affair bears on its face unmistakable marks of absurdity, utter and unmitigated. In the second, there are only sixteen or eighteen thousand slaves in New Orleans, out of a population of one hundred and fifty thousand souls. In the third, it is an insult to our people to suppose that much less than one seventh of the negroes could scare, run, conquer and plunder, a city like ours. In the fourth lace, where would be the United States soldiers when the negroes were taking the barracks and arsenals, with a Bowie knife, a sabre, a revolver, a pound of powder, a bag of bullets, two silver whiches, and two boxes of percussion caps? Where would be the citizens, when they were firing the city, and plundering the Mint and the Banks?— There are not three thousand able bodied negro slaves in the city-seven-eights of whom would die for their masters and mistresses before they would see harm befall them-not one in twenty has the slightest knowledge of the use of arms and yet these were to plunder a city, and massacre its citizens, who, in such an emergency, could, in two hours, raise twelve thousand armed men! A more preposterous idea never entered the minds of grannice, either of the imacoline or feminine gender, There was no danger; there has been no danger; there will be no danger; nor can there be any danger. The slaves of New Orleans are too well off.

From these wild stories, altogether destitute of too happy and contented to think of any other lot. Now, mark "how plain a tale" shall put all this humbuggery down. The negro man over whose terrific declarations so much fuse has been made, was undoubtedly a suspicious character, deserved arresting, and a most exemplary flogging. That's all. Like all petted and indulged negroes, I e be came spoiled, took to drinking, gambling, and all other vices, disobeyed his master, pilfered from him, and has been for some time laboring under maniapotu, and as drunken negroes always do, he became a black Bobadil, overflowing with pot valor, and as great a lar and coward. It is the emphatic opinion of those who know the negro well that his statements at the Police office were the mere ebulitions

What a "lame and impotent conclusion," to what was intended to be a terrible affair.
